THE terrible tragedy enacted on board the steamer Pelican on the 24th ultimo, between Mithe and Vinlong, news of which has come from Saigon, was evidently planned beforehand, and the perpetrators of it must have been old hands at the work. At first sight it seems almost incredible that four men should be able to overcome the whole crew and the remaining passengers as well. But their victims, unconscious of impending danger, were not prepared for the sudden attack; and doubtless imagined the pirates were more numerous than they were. The panic was evidently most complete, nor is it much to be wondered at when the desperate violence of the pirates is considered. Murder followed murder in rapid and terrifying succession, and the horrified and startled crew seem to been paralysed with terror. It is believed that at least ten of the crew and passengers were either murdered or drowned. The pirates, having plundered, then scuttled the vessel. They, of course, made good their escape to shore, as did a few of those belonging to the ship. Now it is obvious that these desperadoes must have had some assistance; indeed, it is stated that one of the firemen was in collusion with them and participated in the crimes committed. But even with his assistance, it is surprising that the daring attempt should have proved so entirely successful. The event, following close upon the Anna outrage, should, at all events, help to enforce one lesson. It is neces. On the 21st ult, a deputation, consisting of the Earl of Shaftesbury, Sir A. Cotton, Mr. B? the institution says they will pay seventy-five S. Meaflows, Mr. Richard, M.P., Mr. Alex, McArthur, Mr. J. W. Pease, M.P., Alderman M'Arthur, M.P., General Alexander, Professor Sheldon Ames, Mr. Mark Stewart, M.P., Dr Underhill, Mr. W. H. James, M.P., and others, waited upon the Marquis of Saliebury, from the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade, for the purpose of urging non the Government the desirability of restricting the traffic in opium. The Marquis of Salisbury was accompanied by Lord G. Hamilton, the Under Secretary for The Earl of Shaffesbury, in introducing the lepatation, said they were desirous to show the state of things existing, though they did not eay that Her Majesty's present Government was responsible for it. The deputation wanted to excite the interest and attention to what they considered was a very discreditable state of things. He bimself brought the subject before the House of Commons in 1843, and it received a great deal of attention at the time, but the nuestion had assumed most important proportions since that time. The revenue derived from opium was then £1,000,000; it was now £9,000,000, and there was every prospect of its increasing more and more every year; and the traffic in opium might become altogether unmanageable. The deputation implored the go- British Burmah. Official documents show vernment of the country to look into the existing state of things. There were but few persons who would not deny the evils that aruse from the consumption of opium. He had more physically or morally injurious than the consumption of opium. The persons he represented were particularly alarmed because the opinm traffic would not be confined to its present limits, for the local government was using every effort to extend the consumption of the drug to every part of the East. It was now imported into British Burmah. At the same time we recognise that you Lordship has to deal with the existing Opium icctions to the trade are of the most insuperable character, we beg, as an immediate practical enggestion, to draw your Lordship's attention to the desirableness in the first place of puting a limit-to the increase of the traffic. We note that in 1869 the Secretary of State for India sanctioned a proposal of the Bengal overnment that the unnual sales for export should be fixed at 48,000 chests. In 1870 Sir

Rutherford Alcock, then Her Majesty's Representative at the Court of Peking, visited Calcutta to endeavour to secure the support of the revision of the Treaty of Tientsin, which Sir. Rutherford had just arranged with the Chinese authorities, by which the duty on opium imported-into-Ohina was to be raised from thirtyto fifty taels per chest. On this occasion Sir Intherford Aloock assured the Viceroy and ennoil of his conviction "that the abborrence expressed by the Government and people of hing for opium, as destructive to the Chinese nation, is genuine and deep-seated;" e " declared his belief that the Chinese Gover -ment would be ready to adopt any reasonable. proposition for a mutual and simultaneous repression of the growth of the poppy. In face of these facts the Supreme Government of India, on the 25th March, 1870, came to a definite resolution "to increase the annual provision of opium in Bengal for export to China to 60,000 chests," and even took into consideration the possibility of developing the cultivation in new districts, perhaps even in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies. Last September Sir William Muir introduced nto the Council "The Indian Opium Act, 1875." or which the power bitherto possessed by the Government in the Bengal Presidency is extonded to all parts of British India. Should his Bill become law, it will put it into the power of the Government to promote the cultivation of the poppy in every portion of their territory. Under these circumstances we venture respectfully to hope that your Lordship will give be Deputation some assurance that no farther efforts will be made to increase the production prium for export to China, to whatever extent may appear to ba adventageous to the Indian Trensury. We fivould entertain a nope that your Lordship is prepared to go farther thun his, and to determine upon a steady decrease n the production; and if your Lordship shares our sentiments as to the nature of the trade, you will be prepared to diminish it even at the sacrifice of revenue, as the increase of income from other sources shall enable the Indian Go-

In 1864 "a majority of the respectable native Arakanese petithat their own children and of the young men of the country had become drunkards, and had acquired within a few years a craving for spirits and opium." This report states: "Opium-cuting is not a Burman habit: it is a new vice." The process of demoralisation is thus described Organised efforts were made by Bengal agents to introduced the use of the druggand to create i taste for it amongst the rising generation. The general plan was to open a shop with a few cakes of opium, and to invite the young men in, and distribute it gratuitously. Then when the taste was established the opinm was sold at a low rate. Finally, as it spread throughout the ueighbourhood, the price was raised and large profits enuned." The Supreme Government of India is directly responsible for the introduction of onium into Burmah. "There is no poppy cultivation in Pegu. The import of opium by private individuals is strictly forbidden. The only opium that comes into the Province is what is supplied by orders to the Revenue Board, Bengal, to the Deputy Commissioner of Districts on their indenting for it. The use of this deleterious drug, strictly prohibited in the Burman time, has been considerably on the increase of late." Private information recently

The cardinals must each ding alone in his own cell till the Pope is elected. There are three methods of election—election by compromise, by adoration, and by ballot. In the election by compromise the cardinals, if unable to agree, nominate one or more members of their body to designate the new Pope. Election by adoration or acclamation takes place when a number of the cardinals. impuring to two-thirds at least, acclaim the Pope without preliminary ballot. The hallot, however, is the method now regularly adopted, and the method of taking it has been fixed by Greg by XV. and Urban VIII. sent are, as we have said, necessary for election, and the vote is secret. The act of any cardinal has received two-thirds of the RELIGION OF THE GIPSIES.
